

LAST EDITION. AFTER THE ETA.

Uncle Sam's Cruisers Receive Orders for the Chase.

Story of Marshal Spencer, Who Was Carried Out to Sea.

Grave International Complications Arising, Similar to Those in 1863.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 8.—A. M.—All officers and men of the cruiser Charleston were ordered to be on board that ship at 5 o'clock this morning.

She has left the Navy Yard, and instead of anchoring off the coast of California, has been ordered to go to sea, to try her gun.

It is here considered certain that she has been ordered to pursue the Eta.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 8.—The cruiser Omaha is in San Diego harbor, having put in on her way home from the Asiatic station.
She was last day too late to interfere with the sailing of the Eta, and it is very doubtful if she can be of any service in this latest international dilemma. Her commander has reported by telegraph to Washington and is awaiting orders.

It is probable that both the Eta and the scholar Robert and the latter in connection with the ship and food nothing to be suspicious of. She continued to receive coal until 12:20 A. M., at which time I retired. I did not sleep much during the night on account of several of the crew, whom I saw looking through the window of my stateroom, which made me feel nervous. During Wednesday nothing unusual occurred until 5 P. M., when a boat containing First Mate Nelson, the Surgeon, with a medicine chest, and two passengers came to the ship. As soon as the passengers landed from the boat one of them had a short conversation with the captain. I was at that time in the dining-room. Five minutes later I found to my surprise that the steamer was under full steam and making for the open sea. The captain came in to see me and invited me to go with him. He offered me a chair, and a second
found that he had left a revolver and a letter. He exhorted a revolver and asked me if I was armed. The captain acting as spokesman, said that he was not a desper-ado, but that he was a man of honor, and that he was going to give a sign or stamp overboard. He said that he was going to give a sign or stamp overboard.
I was so dumfounded that I could not answer. He then called two of the Chilean crew and they stood guard near the door.
He then told me that he was not a desper-ado, but that he was a man of honor, and
going to give a sign or stamp overboard.

After I was left on board in charge of the steamer I turned my attention to the ship and food nothing to be suspicious of. She continued to receive coal until 12:20 A. M., at which time I retired. I did not sleep much during the night on account of several of the crew, whom I saw
room, which made me feel nervous. During Wednesday nothing unusual occurred until
5 P. M., when a boat containing First Mate
Nelson, the Surgeon, with a medicine chest,
and two passengers came to the ship. As soon as the passengers landed from the boat one of
tain. I was at that time in the dining-
surprise that the steamer was under full steam
with him. He offered me a chair, and a second
letter. He exhorted a revolver and asked
spokesman, said that he was not a desper-
going to give a sign or stamp overboard.

Deputy United States Marshal Spencer gave to a World correspondent the following version of his experiences on the Eta.

the steamer I turned my attention to the
ship and food nothing to be suspicious of. She continued to receive coal until 12:20 A. M., at which time I retired. I did not sleep much during the night on
room, which made me feel nervous. During Wednesday nothing unusual occurred until
5 P. M., when a boat containing First Mate
Nelson, the Surgeon, with a medicine chest,
and two passengers came to the ship. As soon as the passengers landed from the boat one of
surprise that the steamer was under full steam
with him. He offered me a chair, and a second
letter. He exhorted a revolver and asked
spokesman, said that he was not a desper-
going to give a sign or stamp overboard.

About this time I noticed them lifting out of the boat. They immediately placed in position on the upper deck, after which they were loaded in my presence. Returning a few minutes later the captain said: "I have spoken to the pilot, and instead of making for the open sea, he is going to make for the open sea. We will meet a boat from a pilot boat lying at Baltimore Point. He said that he was going to give a sign or stamp overboard.

On reaching the bridge I found on the deck below 100 Chileans, all armed to the teeth, each having a repeating rifle and most of them dressed in uniform consisting of red caps and jackets. The captain gave a sneaky laugh and said: "See, we have changed a bit."

I looked at the pilot and asked: "Are you going to guide the ship out?" The captain spoke up and said: "No, exhibiting a revolver: this is going to guide it. The pilot turned pale and said: 'I guess I am in for it.'"

By this time we were nearing the entrance to the harbor. The captain gave orders to the crew to put over a ladder: also to the pilot to slow down. Escorting me to the ladder, he said: "I am going to put you putting you to this annoyance."

After I was lowered over the side the Eta then started on her way. The heading north.

Making inquiries from the boatman, I found that I was to be landed eight miles from San Diego. I protested very vigorously to being taken to such a distance from the passage of the vessel out of the harbor, also to leaving the ship while in possession of a prisoner until they arrived at a point where they intended to put me off. They were very careful to say nothing in my hearing that would reveal any future action, except the captain's assurance that the Eta was going to make for the open sea.

It is rumored here that the cruiser Charleston will be sent to the Eta. It is very doubtful on the part of naval officials as to the right of the United States Government to send her, but the circumstance attending such an event would have great importance and might lead to grave complications.

The case is similar to that of the Confederate cruisers fitted out in English ports during the war of the Rebellion, and the position of the United States Government clearly stated by Secretary Seward. The Chileans have not been accorded the same rights as by any power.

The officers of the Spanish warship Nautilus will be treated to an exhibition of the workings of the Fire Department Wednesday next.

The price of New York is allowed to drop considerably, but the price of the "Cotton Blissness" is still high.

MORE EVIDENCE PROMISED.

Byrnes Said to Have Made New Discoveries as to Frenchy's Guilt.

Not to Be Disclosed Until the Inquest Monday Afternoon.

No new developments are expected in the case of Ben Ali, better known as "Frenchy No. 1," who is now confined in the Tombs as the suspected murderer of old Carrie Brown, until the beginning of the coroner's inquest next Monday.

It is reported on good authority, however, that Inspector Byrnes has been doing some quiet additional work since the inquest was adjourned a week ago to-day, and that the fruits of his labors may result in the placing before the coroner of some new evidence in addition to that now in possession.

Just what this new evidence will be is difficult to say, for the inspector still preserves a complete silence, and even at the District Attorney's office to-day no definite confirmation of the report could be obtained.

The Grand Jury continues its sitting to-day, but did not, it was said, take up the consideration of the East River Hotel murder.

Levy, Friend & House, Frenchy's counsel, said this morning that now that Mr. House was through with the case of Dramatic Agent Elbogen, he proposed to devote his entire attention to the case of his Algerian client in the Tombs.

An Arabian interpreter has been secured, and by the time the coroner's inquest is held the firm hope is to be in a position to make a successful defense for him.

HOWELL OSBORN CARED FOR.

His Mother's Will Gives Him a Millionaire's Income.

The will of Miriam A. Osborn, widow of stock-broker Charles Osborn and mother of Howell Osborn, was filed to-day.

She places all of her son Howell's share safely out of the reach of any wife who has been a professional actress, or any children of such a marriage, and she settles the estate of Miriam A. Osborn Memorial Home Association, and makes a bequest to Yale College of $100,000 for a memorial to her husband.

Howell Osborn does not get one dollar absolutely, but if within thirty days he consents to the probate of the will he is to receive the income of $40,000 for life and one-half of the residue of the estate.

NATIONAL BANK CLOSED UP.

The Spring Garden, of Philadelphia, Forced to Close Its Doors.

Great Excitement in Financial Circles, but the Cause is Kept Secret.

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—The Spring Garden National Bank, located at Twelfth and Spring Garden streets, in this city, closed its doors at noon to-day.

This institution is not a very large one, but it was considered sound, and the announcement caused great astonishment.

The bank sustained a heavy run about four years ago. No statement has yet been made.
The bank had a paid-up capital of $750,000, and, according to its last report, a surplus of $127,500.

The Spring Garden Bank has been in trouble at various times since November last. The failure will not have much effect here, though it may cause some temporary trouble elsewhere through its connections. The bank was one of the depositaries of city funds.

The bank closed its doors by order of the Bank Examiner, on instructions from Washington that the bank must make good the legal reserve or suspend. The bank has $144,000 of city funds on deposit.

It declared its usual 5 per cent. semi-annual dividend on its stock last Tuesday.
Francis W. Kennedy is President of the bank and the cashier is Henry H. Kennedy.

ELBOGEN FOUND GUILTY.
After Being Out All Night the Jury Agree to Convict.

The jury in the trial of August Elbogen for kidnaping young Jennie Reckwig, brought in a verdict of guilty at 11:40 o'clock this morning, having been out over night.

Elbogen stood like one stunned when the verdict was rendered. He represents that he will be sent to Sing Sing Prison for fifteen years, that being the extreme penalty of the law.

Elbogen is now fifty-five years old, though he looks much younger, despite his iron-gray hair.

Elbogen, who was formerly a prima donna, was in court. He covered his face with his hands and sobbed hysterically as her husband was led back to the prisoners' pen.

He was remanded to the Tombs till next Friday at the request of his counsel, House & Friend, when he will be sentenced by Judge Hartine.

None of the young girls who had been lured by Elbogen's high-sounding advertisements for "first ladies" were in court.

Elbogen's crime consisted in luring young and innocent girls from their homes to far-off New Orleans, where he represented that he was a millionaire in first-class theatres, when in reality he was only procuring them for the lowest concert dives of the Crescent City.

Jennie Reckwig, of whose kidnapping her stands convicted, is a slight, girlish creature of sixteen years. He engaged her to be the leading lady in Schoenhausen & Placé's theatrical company, and she accepted these theatricals to be first class in every way.

When the girl reached New Orleans she was immediately ushered into the low life of two commodore and beer hall, where her duties consisted of peddling beer among the vile men who patronized the places, soliciting and submitting to the most gross indignities and in-decentities.

She was finally rescued by an association of ladies of New Orleans organized for the protection of young girls. She was sent home, and the proceeds of the theatricals which she performed were turned over to the ladies.

Elbogen was born and reared in this city.
He has a dramatic agency in Union square and another office in East Eighth street.

Jennie Reckwig is only one of a score of Elbogen's victims, and though the verdict of the jury rendered yesterday morning, Elbogen is a compromise verdict, accompanied by a strong recommendation that he be sent to Sing Sing for life.

The jury went out at 5:30 last evening. A ballot was taken immediately. It stood for twelve years for life, and for six years for a second ballot resulted in conviction, a for acquittal. After a long discussion another ballot was taken at 10 o'clock last night. It stood 11 for conviction, 1 for acquittal.

Elbogen was taken to Sing Sing at 11:40 this morning. He was taken to Sing Sing at
